Standing with CivicAction are almost thirty organizations – including Bell, TD Bank Group, RBC, Sun Life Financial, Toronto Life, Facebook, CAMH, Unifor, and Voices from the Street – committed to taking action to make the workplace a more supportive place for employees' mental health. The organizations are members of the Champions Council co-chaired by Paula Allen, Vice President of Research and Integrative Solutions at Morneau Shepell and Rupert Duchesne, Group Chief Executive at Aimia Inc. They are joined by an Advisory Group from Great-West Life Centre for Mental Health in the Workplace, Mental Health International, Ontario Shores Centre for Mental Health Sciences, St. Joseph's Healthcare Hamilton, and the Wellesley Institute.

givejedahand #Onebravenight Johnny read #thenews. It was all about #mentalhygiene / #MentalHealth #Fascism. He wasn't surprised to see #CAMH and #Bell and the #TDBank shoulder to shoulder. The idea that they wanted to work together for his #MentalHealth made him laugh. Wasn't it more likely that they wanted to #stigmatize unhappy workers as #mentallyill while babbling about #mentalillness to ignore the real problem - themselves?! However the presence of Pat Capponi rubbing shoulders with these jerks and calling #collusion #voicesfromthestreets - made Johnny PUKE!

givejedahand #CAMH claims to want to #endstigma while partnering with #BRANDING companies. Truly #orwellian!

givejedahand Ah! #DefeatDenial! #Darknesstolight! For #BIGDONATIONS #CAMH lends its #sealofapproval to #abusive #corporations while #CAMH CEO Catherine Zahn - and a whole list of #pr firm clients - #label them #SAFE - like #CAMH itself. This is #fraudulent #BS. #CAMH is #mentalillness - #THISisMentalIllness!
